

The Chartered Institute of Building – becoming a member

Chartered members are among the highest regarded professionals working throughout the international construction industry

Our membership represents the diversity of roles within the construction industry and promotes the delivery of high work standards and values.

Why become a member?

CIOB members are construction professionals with a common commitment to achieving and maintaining the highest possible standards.

CIOB members are drawn from a wide range of professional disciplines working within building and construction supply chains. The membership includes clients, consultants and contractors, as well as specialists in regulation, research and education. This provides a pool of specialist knowledge to inform the way in which the industry develops.

Chartered Member status, and the designations MCIOB and FCIOB, are recognised and respected internationally as the mark of true construction professionalism.

Through its international membership, the CIOB is making a hugely influential contribution to one of the world's most important industries.

Holders of the CIOB qualification are recognised throughout the industry as knowledgeable and competent in their field, with a personal commitment to continual professional development.
